

The above (Central Limit Theorem) can be used for example to generate Gaussian random numbers using a random number generator which produces only uniformly distributed random numbers. That is much faster than using computationally expensive special functions